

Lansing Community College – Spring 2010

Learning Communities

A Learning Community presents an active learning option for students willing to engage in the adventure of learning about two or more subjects focused around a common theme. In a learning community, students sign up for two or more courses. The student has the opportunity to interact and study with the same group of students in the courses while enjoying the added benefit of having two instructors at the same time to guide successful learning. Courses listed below are available for the Spring 2010 semester.

FIRST STEPS TO SUCCESS

Do you believe there's some magic to "getting" what an author means? Do you believe only some people can write? The answer is "no" on both counts. This learning community takes the mystery out of reading and writing. Small group work and individualized instruction in a lab setting help set the stage for you to build vital skills that will help you on your journey to success. Students who meet the exit competencies for these courses will receive reading and writing levels required to move on to more advanced reading and writing courses. Department approval is required to enroll in these sections. For approval, or more information about these learning communities, contact the Language Skills and Student Development Department at 483-1061.

READ 100, Reading Laboratory
8:10-10:00 am MW (CRN 52159)

&

WRIT 100, Writing Laboratory
10:10-12:00 N MW (CRN 52152)

OR

READ 100, Reading Laboratory
12:10-2:00 pm TTh (CRN 52160)

&

WRIT 100, Writing Laboratory
2:10-4:00 pm TTh (CRN 52153)